Dr. Keith H. Newby, Sr.

Dr. Keith H. Newby is a native of Norfolk where he graduated from Maury High School and Norfolk State University before earning his medical degree from Eastern Virginia Medical School (EVMS). He completed his internship and residency at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia and then served as a fellow in cardiology at Duke University with an emphasis in clinical cardiac electrophysiology. He was the President and CEO of Fort Norfolk Medical Associates from 2010 through 2023.

Dr. Newby currently practices with Bon Secours Cardiology Medical Group. He also serves as Market Director of Community Health Improvement and Engagement for Bon Secours, where his primary role is to aid in the development of programs that address conditions that disproportionately affect under-resourced and underrepresented communities. He strives to improve access to both physical and mental healthcare, promote higher COVID-19 vaccination rates among those populations with lower inoculation rates, address food insecurities, and encourage better overall health through education and community engagement.

In 2009 Dr. Newby founded the James E. Newby, Jr. MD Foundation in honor of his late father (a renowned Cardiologist in his own right) to carry out his family's mission of service. The mission of the Newby Foundation is to improve the health and overall welfare of people by addressing issues that adversely affect under-resourced communities including healthcare, financial instability, food insecurity, and educational inequality.

In addition to his professional and business activities, Dr. Newby holds several board positions including Towne Bank and the Eastern Virginia Medical School (EVMS) Board of Visitors where he serves on the Academic and Student Affairs Committee. He is a co-host of the health segment of "Another View" on Public Radio WHRV and featured on the "Medical Minute with Dr. Keith Newby" series where he is a co-producer for Hampton University radio station WHOV.

In 2023, the Newby Foundation partnered with the Historic First Baptist Church of Norfolk to hold Community Harvest Farmers Markets, a local market aimed at providing access to locally grown fresh fruits and vegetables to underserved populations in the
